

Master of

Public Health (MPH)

Become a public health policy leader and practitioner.

Gain the skills you need to improve community and global health. Public health challenges cover a wide range of issues—from access to clean water to HIV and heart disease to motor vehicle injuries. A career in public health offers you the opportunity to work on causes that are meaningful to you and benefit society.

Through research, education, and promotion of healthy lifestyles, MPH graduates improve the health and well-being of communities. They create programs that focus on preventing disease and injury to improve the quality of life and extend the life expectancy of individuals and populations.

Make an Impact

Rivier's MPH prepares you to pursue leadership roles in state, federal, and international health associations, as well as the private sector and academia. With comprehensive study in global health, healthcare administration, health policy, epidemiology, genomics and informatics, and more, you'll acquire the knowledge and skills needed to positively impact others in the next phase of your career.
